Calgary Live Entertainers Liven Up Line-ups at H1N1 Vaccine Clinics

(Calgary, November 5, 2009). How do you ease a tense situation? Make someone smile! That's what Quicksilver Entertainment has in mind to reduce the stress of waiting in line-ups for the H1N1 vaccine. Starting at 7:30 am Thursday, November 5, 2009 the crowd outside of the Avenida Village Mall Clinic will be wowed and dazzled with complimentary live entertainment.

Quicksilver founder, Eric Fairlie will be on site until 9:30 am Thursday, November 5, 2009 to put smiles on the crowds face with balloon sculptures. It is expected that Calgary youthful magician Acetrife (pronounced 'Ace-strife') aka. Matthew Antolin will join him Friday.

"There's a lot of turmoil going on in Calgary," states Acetrife, "the right thing to do is to find some way to help." The 19 year old magician is a quickly rising star. Since starting performing magic only 3 years ago he has had the opportunity to travel around the country, sharing his passion for close-up illusions. His talents have caught the eyes of some of Canada's top magicians.

Fairlie adds, "It seems that the public is very tense over the H1N1 situation. What we would like to do is ease the tension of the situation by reaching out to our fellow Calgarians with our talents. We can't solve the problem but can make it more bearable. Laughter is the best medicine, isn't it? So we hope to improve people's health creating as positive an attitude as possible."

Quicksilver plans to assemble a troupe of entertainers before Saturday to provide entertainment at clinics around the city. "I'd like to challenge all of Calgary's live entertainers to strengthen our sense of community by joining us and sharing their talents in this desperate situation."

Exact times for Vaccine Clinic performances will be posted on at www.quicksilvershow.com as performers are available. Further details will be released as they develop. Quicksilver performers will be taking precautions to reduce contracting or spreading any illness. Volunteer performers should do the same by using medical gloves, hand-antiseptic, avoiding physical contact with crowd members, etc.

Quicksilver Entertainment was founded in 2007 to be a leading provider of quality, high-energy, and astounding live entertainment. It specializes in offering magic and variety entertainment.
